Dear Tom,

Hiring in itself is bad enough, what with ads to place and applications to scan and resumes to sort through...plus you still have a business to run. To make matters worse is the outrageous cost of finding people. Newspapers nickel-and-dime you to death. Fort Bend area newspapers want as much as $1,350 a year for six measly lines. And the Houston Chronicle? Let's not go there.

YIKES! Have you placed employment ads online lately?

The big online job boards are no better. Did you realize Monster.com will charge you $2,500 to post ten jobs a year if your goal is to hire five people? If you want to search resumes for a month, make that $3,600. Maybe you only want to hire four people. Or two. Either way, that'll be $1,950, please--and all you get for your money is FOUR postings that go to job seekers everywhere and anywhere. Oh yes, and two weeks' worth of resume searching. That's all.

Pardon my saying so, but that's just too much money for the result, which is usually hundreds of resumes to weed through, most of them from outside the area: people in Montana and Florida and New Hampshire and Maine who want to move to our beloved Fort Bend...and expect you to pay for it!

A sane, affordable LOCAL alternative to print and big-board classified ads

There is a better way, a sane, affordable alternative for reaching LOCAL job seekers. Maybe they're people who live here in Fort Bend, or folks in Houston who want to commute in the opposite direction to avoid traffic snarls. Or perhaps they're people who already want to move to the Fort Bend area--not those who are looking for a job anywhere and figure Fort Bend is just as good as the next town.

Allow me to introduce that alternative:

FortBendJobs.com, a local online employment resource designed to quickly connect you with the local people you need at a fraction of the cost of the papers and big boards. And as a member of the Fort Bend Chamber of Commerce, you are also eligible for a special, limited-time, members-only Site Sponsorship offer that will allow you to tap into the full power of FortBendJobs.com at significant savings.
